SINA Battles Blight: Rehab Construction Project to Create New Homes

Hartford, CT, August 17, 2021

SINA (Southside Institutions Neighborhood Alliance), a partnership between Connecticut's Children's, Hartford Hospital and Trinity College, will hold an event to mark the beginning of construction on a new homeownership project, at 1:00 pm on Wednesday, September 1, 2021, at 41 Madison Street, Hartford, CT.

The celebration kicks off Cityscape Phase VII, which will create four new homeownership opportunities on Madison and Squire Streets in Frog Hollow. The four vacant historic properties to be rehabbed represent a total of 11 housing units. One of the properties was owned by an absentee landlord who abandoned it to blight and illegal activity. Once completed, the properties will be purchased by low- and moderate-income first-time homebuyers. An additional benefit is that the renovations will put these properties back on the city's tax rolls.

"Renovating these vacant, blighted properties improves public safety, provides a family with a healthy home in which to build generational wealth, and gives the community a committed neighbor who will take pride in their property. The building at 41 Madison had an irresponsible absentee owner and was an eyesore used by squatters and drug dealers," explains SINA Executive Director Melvyn Colon. "SINA's purchase of it at a bank auction is the culmination of our work with neighborhood residents and the Safety Alliance for Everyone to address these problems."

"We received $1.1 million from the State of Connecticut Department of Housing to continue this important work," says Colon. "We are grateful to Housing Commissioner Seila Mosquera-Bruno, to Senator John Fonfara for his support, and to the Local Initiative Support Corporation for providing an $800,000 construction loan. Other funders who support our housing programs include the City of Hartford, Travelers Foundation, UIL Holdings, Eversource and Webster Bank."

All four buildings are on the National Register of Historic Places and will be restored with attention to period details. The construction will meet Energy Star 3.5 standards, including energy-efficient insulation, windows and heating systems, plus EV plugs for electric cars.

Hartford Hospital President Bimal Patel said "It's remarkable that our three institutions have banded together in such a strong partnership to improve the quality of life in this community. That includes the health, safety and economic vitality of the neighborhood, its residents and students, and the well-being of our employees, patients and visitors. It's clear that our housing and community economic development efforts through SINA are aligned with neighborhood safety."

James E. Shmerling, DHA, FACHE, President/CEO of Connecticut's Children's, said "I am delighted to celebrate a partnership that helps children in South Central Hartford grow, learn and succeed in a safe, supportive environment. Social determinants—the circumstances in which people live and work—have a powerful influence on health. That's why Connecticut Children's has embraced a broad definition of community that includes mitigation efforts and work to ensure safe, healthy housing for all Hartford families."

"Trinity College President Joanne Berger-Sweeney said, "Public-private partnerships are vital for moving a community forward. Together with Hartford Hospital and Connecticut Children's Medical Center, SINA has been key in attracting investment that redeveloped 83 buildings, creating nearly 200 homes that provide stability for families and our neighborhood. These efforts greatly increase safety and quality of life for all residents, including our students, faculty, and staff, and we are proud to work together to reach our shared goals."
