DO COLLEGE STUDENTS HAVE TO FILE A TAX RETURN?

If you make enough money, the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) will require you to file a tax return. Many college students might not earn enough to need to. But even those who are not legally required to file might want to send in a return. A refund could be coming your way.

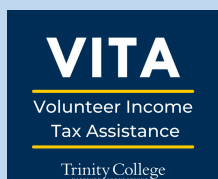

Before you file, you'll need to know your status. If anyone claims you as a dependent on their taxes, you're able and may still be required to file a return. It's a good idea to discuss that with your parent or guardian before filing.

FEDERAL INCOME TAX RETURN REQUIREMENTS

According to the IRS, if you are a dependent who is unmarried, under 65, and not blind, you must file a tax return if:

- Your unearned income (which includes taxable interest, capital gain distributions, unemployment compensation, and taxable Social Security benefits) was more than $1,250
- Your earned income was more than $13,850
- Your gross income (total earned and unearned) was more than the larger of $1,250 or your earned income (up to $13,850) plus $400

If you won't be claimed as a dependent on someone else's taxes, you must file a return if you made $13,850. College students should double check their taxable income as some portion or all of scholarships or grant can be taxable.
